Clean hip hop playlist apple music 2020

Gimel Young Guru Keaton, one of the music industry's most famous sound engineers, helped hand-craft songs that were recorded by the likes of Beyoncé, Drake, Rihanna and Jay Z, his most associated hits. As an expert in the technical complexity of the recording studio who's also deeply steeped in hip-hop culture (he has a side performance as executive producer for indie rap label Jamla Records), Guru has worked closely with producers like Pharrell Williams and Just Blaze to help bring their sound ideas to life. We are problem solve people, he talks about his role in the recording process. Anytime there's a problem, an engineer is supposed to perk up and be like, 'Oh, wow, this is a challenge for me. I have something to design and build to figure this out.' After spending over 20 years and countless hours behind the soundboard, here are some of the ways that the young Guru has found to keep himself inspired and continue to do his highest caliber work. Young Guru and Jay Z met in 1999 after the engineer was hired for an album by Jay Z's patron, Memphis Bleek, who was signed to the rapper's Roc-A-Fella Records. They have worked closely ever since, and Guru has helped create big songs like Empire State of Mind, Izzo (H.O.V.A.), and Dirt Off Your Shoulder. I'm lucky in that Jay absolutely was the whole process, Mr. Guru. He comes in, lets you know what he wants, and lets you work. Either he likes or doesn't like it, or he'll take notes. My job is to translate the terms of my pariso people into sound terms. But also make time for up-and-comersWhen you're at the top of your career, it's easy to fall into routine. Working with young, un-established artists can push you in unexpected directions. With Jay [Z], it's like, how do we keep growing and not fuck up the legacy? But it was hard to sit in a room then many albums and be like, 'What did we not talk about?' Guru is always looking for the next sound, a new inspiration. Sometimes I say to Jay, 'You're in the clouds where sometimes you miss the ground shit or you can't start messing with it until it gets to a certain level because of who you are and your reputation. Remember: It's not about your jobM engineers are making the best artists and sound producers of them. Although Guru is now relatively famous, he is careful to keep in mind that he is not the star. When you go to a live show, you don't sit there like, 'Yo, the engineer is killing it! What preamps did he use?' The only time you think about [an engineer] is when it sounds terrible. Our job is to overcome difficulties and make artists shine. Protect your creative spaceWith today's studio technology, artists and even producers are not necessarily in the studio while Young Guru is working on the songs. In some ways, that can be helpful. I don't like someone on my shoulders, he said. It's like you're cooking and someone constantly sticks their finger in. When they're like, 'This tastes it's like, 'No shit, I'm just getting started. There's no sugar in there yet! Let me finish cooking.' But there are also audiences; if your goal is to reach more people, sometimes you have to adjust your approach. I'm the super underground hip-hop guy- I want to hear complicated shit, Mr. Guru. Jay was like, 'Gu, I can rhyme for you all day—that's not going to sell albums. I have to do this interestingly enough for people who don't care about that as well as for you.' The audience didn't buy pure art, so I threw some McDonald's in it. There's a reason McDonald's sells billions. Hero Images/Getty Images Throw a backyard BARBECUE party? Kicking back by the pool? You need the right music to soundtrack the event. If hip-hop is your speed, then you want the right combination of warmth, nostalgia, and surprise. Fire up the grill and pop up this hip-hop BBQ playlist. Camp Lo's Uptown Saturday Night has no shortage of warm tunes, but this is one that definitely comes when you're trying to add a slice of soul to the party. A great warm weather song from Raekwon's Only Built 4 Cuban Linx. Don't play this at your BBQ if you plan to invite your mom... Unless, of course, she is a loyal Wu-Tang fan. Summertime is, well, the last summer rap song. No summer/BBQ playlist is complete without Will Smith and Jazzy Jeff's fine jam. This particular tribe has only grown sweeter since the 90s. Fire this up to promote crowd participation at your party. Can I kick? Yes, you certainly can. Her neck had a sweeter smell than a plate of sweet potatoes with extra syrup, rapping Big Boi on Spottieottiedopalicious. And this is definitely sweet enough to evoke swoons and a bit of nostalgia. Each BBQ playlist needs an element of surprise. Next Level is definitely one of those songs that will have people going, Oh yes, I've not heard this in a while. Teddy Riley and 'nem swaggering all over a flirty beat. Dr. Dre spits out his most harmless rhymes ever. Ah, glorious days when people say things No diggity. What's not to love? With the rap party masterfully composed, Biggie testifies about his fantasy of kicking it with some flying women and T-Bone steak, while smoking in the jacuzzi. Ideal for slow, bumpy and grinding segments of Party. When this happens, watch out for freaks. This is just perfect for everything. Pool party, BBQ, wedding, Bar Mitzvahs. Everything. But be careful – Int'l Players Anthem will have your customers do their best Willie Hutch impression, go i-i-i-i choose you, bae. Kanye West and T-Pain take you to a place where life is good whether you're broke or wealthy. One of the highlights from Yeezy's Graduation LP. The music video shows Ice Cube rolling through an unusually peaceful day in South Central L.A. The song has a length of exactly 4:20. #coincidence? #methinksnot Not forward as Nelly has not had the game in a chokehold for 8 straight months. Country Grammar is a reminder of the era of rap-singing and left-eyed bandaid. Fantastic Voyage is one of Coolio's better songs not named Gangsta's Paradise. It's a fun song to tip to, or simply eat potato salad to. Sometimes you just need a dash of hip-hop history to go with your BBQ party. For that, just walk through the legs of the brave Delight Rapper into the past. A historically necessary landmark song, it is preserved by the Library of Congress. A great story of survival meets a great summer song. When going gets tough, just eat some beef ribs. A simple but powerful hit single from The Fugees' second smash album. Before you know it, Fu-gee-ia is taking over your client's body and making them move to the rhythm. Some smooth jazz from The Renaissance of Q-Tip. This is also a great option if your customers are new to hip-hop. Weekends were made for Michelob rapping Digital Underground's Money B, echoing the classic beer. Even if you are not interested in Michelob or weekend grilling, you will still enjoy this tune on any day of the week. Perfect for sunny days when you want to kick back and reimagine humble beginnings. Your idea of a party sitting in a carport, looking down the driveway and watching the car go by? It's all right. It's not exactly clear which grass they're rapping about, but who gives a flyin' paraplegic chicken? What's more relaxing than Sunday morning poetry set to folkly grooviness by Bubba Sparxxx and Timbaland? Blue-eyed rap never sounds so soulful. In the vein of Ice Cube's It Was a Good Day, Scarface takes us on a journey through his hood in H-town, TX, where everything is everything for sheezy. On My Block is finally about loyalty and friendship, which is what the BBQ party is all about. David Banner literally put Mississippi on his back. He tattooed his home state on his back and was title of his first album Mississippi: The Album. Most people know Banner for like Like a Pimp, but tucked away in the middle of the same album is Cadillac on the 22s, a stirring warning about dangerous streets Mississippi. A bonus track from Good Kid, M.A.A.d City, The Recipe sees Kendrick Lamar and Dre pay tribute to the triumvirate of west coast tourist attractions: women, hay, dry, Weather. Weather.
